Two timelines related to viruses in American biological bases!
Foreign media: creepy

If not more and more Americans come forward and say that they may have infectious diseases of the unknown respiratory system before the outbreak in China, people will not search for a popular word - Fort Detrick Biological Base (Fort Detrick Biological Base).

Mentioning this base, foreign media wrote a sentence in a prominent position: "The darkest experiment center of the US government." The epidemic in the United States has many mysteries about the base. How can the eloquent American politicians still present themselves as innocent?

China Daily New Media launched three in-depth essays, starting from the "catty" in Detrick Castle.
China Daily reported that since the epidemic, the unpopular reference to Fort Detrick Biological Base (Fort Detrick in Frederick, Maryland USA) has been frequently mentioned.

The biological base has been very concerned because the US media revealed that a few months before the virus outbreak in China, an “unexplained fatal respiratory disease” broke out near Fort Detrick Biological Base. More importantly, in July last year, before the emergence of unknown communicable diseases, Fort Detrick Biological Base was closed down mysteriously, and the US government has so far been reluctant to explain the reasons for the sudden shutdown.

The voice of doubt in the United States continues, and the demand for clarification of the relationship between the closure of Fort Detrick Biological Base and the "big flu" and new coronary pneumonia has also increased.
On March 10th, a netizen named B.Z. launched a petition on the White House petition website. The petitioner listed the timeline related to the “New Crown Virus” outbreak at Fort Detrick Biological Base, hoping that the US government would give a reasonable explanation:

In July 2019, the US Army Medical Research Institute for Infectious Diseases in Fort Detrick was closed;

In August 2019, a large-scale "flu" outbreak killed more than 10,000 people;

On 8/2019, a large-scale "influenza" killed more than 10,000 people;

In October 2019, the United States organized the "Event 201" -Global Epidemic Exercise with the participation of the Deputy Director of the CIA;

In November 2019, China discovered unexplained pneumonia;

On 11/2019, pneumonia of undetermined origin was found in China;

In February 2020, the world's outbreak epidemic broke out;

In March 2020, a large number of English news reports about the closure of Fort Detrick were deleted, showing "404 not found" ...
What makes things even more confusing is the global epidemic exercise code-named 201 mentioned on the timeline. This US global epidemic exercise was held on October 18, 2019, because the script of the exercise is very similar to the development of today's epidemic, which has aroused continuous concern of the international community.

The Event 201 scenario

Event 201 simulates an outbreak of a novel zoonotic coronavirus transmitted from bats to pigs to people that eventually becomes efficiently transmissible from person to person, leading to a severe pandemic. The pathogen and the disease it causes are modeled largely on SARS, but it is more transmissible in the community setting by people with mild symptoms.

According to the official website of "Event 201", the scenario of the exercise at the time was to simulate an outbreak of a new zoonosis coronavirus (CAPS). The virus is easier to spread than SARS and may be spread by individuals with mild symptoms. The virus was initially transmitted from bats to pigs, then to humans, and eventually mutated to be transmitted from person to person, resulting in a severely transmitted epidemic.

Did the Fort Detrick Biological Base leak this virus? Why is the story of global epidemic exercises so similar to reality? With the outbreak of the US epidemic, there are more and more question marks on the US government on social media.
Shut up and talk about the Fort Detrick Biological Base!

On May 3, 2020, in an interview with the American Broadcasting Company (ABC), US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo ignored the objections of almost all the top scientists and disease control experts in the world and insisted on the absurd remarks such as "The new crown virus came from a laboratory accident in Wuhan, China”, And even lie unfounded: the best experts so far seem to think it is artificial. I now have no reason not to accept this.

POMPEO: Look, the best experts so far seem to think it was manmade. I have no reason to disbelieve that at this point.

Pompeo, who wanted to "dump the pot" in the Wuhan laboratory in China, lifted a stone and smashed his foot. In fact, international public opinion, including the American media and the public, generally believe that the most deserving of international investigation is precisely the Fort Detrick Biological Base, which is unwilling to tell the public the truth.

Netizens living near Fort Detrick said they may have suffered from a terrible unknown respiratory disease back in November 2019.

I live in Delaware, just beside Maryland, a mile apart. From the end of November to the beginning of December, everyone here has a terrible unknown respiratory disease with flu symptoms. My family is there, and my mother almost died in it. Visited the doctor three times and the symptoms lasted 21 days. Very bad, this is not an ordinary flu, and doctors are helpless. Everyone in my treatment center has this symptom. For three weeks, they all said that the doctors could not determine the cause I think this virus first appeared in us, then mutated in China, and then spread back. Since then, my mother has been isolated. So let's see if she has antibodies. And they refused to test us here, as if they didn't want us to know.

I even said that my speculation may be wrong, but the development of things confirmed my idea to some extent. They have now proved that the virus started to spread before the first case appeared. This town in this county has been defined as a dangerous area. A little crazy. I live near a resort area, which is dead in winter and has been closed. So I don't understand how there are so few people here, how can we become a dangerous area. However, when I said that everyone here was sick, it did confirm this. I thank these words and welcome other information. I really don't want things to be like this now. I don't even oppose Trump. I don't think he will know at all. But these are my experiences and speculations based on the information I have. So calling me a fool is useless. I have a college education and I have a very technical job. If you don't agree with me, just do it with you, but I can’t change the facts that are happening here, no matter what you say about me.

On April 29, 2020, the New York Times also raised doubts and wrote in shock in the report: The death toll of new coronary pneumonia in the United States in eight weeks actually exceeded the death toll during the eight-year Vietnam War.

... the reported death toll from the virus in the United States topped 60,000 — more killed in eight weeks than the 58,000 American troops killed in eight years of major combat in Vietnam.

The United States, which has the highest level of medical care, has become the most severely affected country in the world. Doesn't the US government need to find out the real source of the problem?

What is so shameless about it?
As the former US Director of the CIA, Pompeo should be no stranger to Fort Detrick Biological Base.

A report on the US "Politics" news website, with a bold headline and capitalized on this passage: The Secret History of Fort Detrick-The Central Intelligence Agency Consciously Controlled the Experimental Base

The Secret History of Fort Detrick, the CIA’s Base for Mind Control Experiments

The American media bluntly said that this is now a cutting-edge laboratory. But in the 1950s and 1960s, this was the center of the darkest experiment conducted by the US government

Today, it’s a cutting-edge lab. In the 1950s and 1960s, it was the center of the US government's darkest experiments.
In 1942, reports of the Japanese army launching a bacterial war in China aroused the vigilance of the US military. Therefore, the US Army decided to launch a secret plan to develop biological weapons. In 1942, alarmed by reports that Japanese forces were waging germ warfare in China, the Army decided to launch a secret program to develop biological weapons.

The Army hired Ella Baldwin, a biochemist at the University of Wisconsin, to run the project and asked him to find a place for a new biological research base. Baldwin chose the abandoned National Guard base beneath Kodockton Hill, which was called the "Detrick Field".

On March 9, 1943, the Army announced that it would be renamed "Detrick Camp" and designated it as the headquarters of the Army's Biological Warfare Laboratory.
On March 9, 1943, the Army announced that it had renamed the field Camp Detrick, designated it as headquarters of the Army Biological Warfare Laboratories.

In the spring of 1949, the Army established a small, super-secret chemist team at the Detrick camp called the Special Operations Force. Its mission was to find poisonous bacteria that could be used in military operations.

Alan Dulles was the director of the CIA’s Secret Operations Bureau. He believed that this conscious manipulation plan is of great significance, and it is related to the destiny of survival or destruction in the United States. Soon after, Dulles was promoted to lead the plan.

It is reported that this is the prototype of the later CIA’s infamous "Brain Control" (MK-ULTRA) project. In the "007" series of films, British spy James Bond has a "Dr. Q", designed for him a variety of small and lethal spy tools; although this is a fictional film story, but in the Cold War period, the US CIA did There is a genuine "Dr. Q": Dr. Sidney Gottlieb.

In 1951, Dulles hired a chemist to design and supervise and systematically search for critical information.

In 1951, Dulles hired a chemist to design and oversee a systematic search for the key to mind control.

Alan Dulles selected the "Dr. Q" in the CIA-Sidney Gottlieb. Fort Detrick is the inseparable base for this "Dr. Q" to conduct experiments. Gottlieb worked tirelessly to find a way to "blow up" human consciousness, including electric shock and sensory deprivation.

He tested a staggering number of drug combinations and often used other tortures together, including electric shock, deprivation of senses, etc. In the United States, his victims are generally uninformed people in prisons or hospitals. They come from federal prisons in Atlanta and the Drug Addiction Research Center in Lexington, Kentucky.

In 1954, a prison doctor in Kentucky quarantined seven black prisoners and fed them "double, triple, and quadruple" doses of hallucinogenic drugs for 77 consecutive days. They may not even know that they are part of the CIA's highly confidential plan. This plan aims to develop methods of conscious manipulation. The project base is in this little-known US Army base, Fort Detrick, has a very black history. They may have died without knowing they were part of the CIA's highly secretive program to develop ways to control minds — a program based out of a little-known Army base with a dark past, Fort Detrick.
The "Brain Control" (MK-ULTRA) project ended in failure in the early 1960s. However, this is still Gottlieb's chemical base. In 1956, it was renamed Fort Detrick. After the "Brain Control" (MK-ULTRA) project ended, he used it to develop the CIA's poison library. In his freezer, there are stored biological agents that may cause diseases such as smallpox, tuberculosis and anthrax, as well as a variety of organic toxins (including snake venom and paralytic shellfish toxins).

Until 1970, President Nixon ordered all government agencies to destroy their supply of biotoxins. Army scientists followed suit. But it was not until 1975 that the saxitoxin, which killed 55,000 people, was finally destroyed.

More than 100 residents near the biological base have cancerous foreign media: an alarming number!
When people thought that this dark history had become a thing of the past, in 2011, ABC News once again attracted attention.

Still at Fort Detrick Biological Base, more than 100 residents nearby suffered from fatal cancer. Foreign media reported that locals conducted a year-long survey and found an alarming number of cancer patients living in the area. (a startling number of people with cancer living in that area.)

In the ABC report, the vocabulary that is rare in daily life is used-deadly cancer cluster. What does the cancer cluster mean? The definition given by the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is that, over a fixed period of time and in a specific area, the prevalence exceeds the normal expectation.

We decided that a deadly cancer cluster is when more than a hundred people living in that area have developed cancer.

What causes 100 residents of Fort Detrick Biological Base to collectively develop cancer? The media said that it is undeniable that Fort Detrick has been the base of the US military’s biological weapons program for decades. However, the Maryland State Department of Health did not give a satisfactory response at the time, saying that no concrete evidence was found.

The sudden closure of such an important base and unwillingness to disclose the reason is very much suspect!
After a lapse of 8 years, this biological base that cannot erase the black history has another incident. Pompeo was reluctant to explain the whole story, and proved himself innocent, but took China as a shield.

In July 2019, Fort Detrick Biological Base was suddenly closed, but the US Centers for Disease Control refused to release key information on the grounds of "national security reasons".

According to the "New York Times" report, the government suspended the military's research at the frontier biological defense center due to the handling of hazardous materials. It is reported that the suspended study involved a total of 67 "selective agents" and toxins, such as microorganisms that cause Ebola, smallpox, anthrax and plague, as well as organisms that cause ricin.

According to a Russian TV station Today, the US Centers for Disease Control does not trust their wastewater system, and the whole thing is a very big surprise. The fact that the CDC does not trust their wastewater system gets a little crazy!

The New York Times quoted the introduction of spokesman Caree Vander Linden as saying that Fort Detrick was closed because of mechanical failures and the leakage of the new chemical decontamination system that it caused a "termination order". These problems date back to May 2018, when storms flooded and ruined a decades-old steam sterilization plant that the institute had been using to treat wastewater from its labs. Ms. Vander Linden said. The damage halted research for months, until the institute developed a new decontamination system using chemicals. The new decontamination system also needed to change some laboratory procedures. During an inspection in June 2019, the CDC found that the new procedures were not implemented or followed consistently. Van der Linden said that the inspectors also found mechanical failures and leaks of the new chemical decontamination system, but she added that the leaks only occurred in the laboratory and did not leak to the outside. The new system required changes in certain procedures in the laboratories.

She said that this “a series of things” had brought a suspension order, and the Institute also lost its registration license. "A combination of things" led to the cease and desist order, and the loss of registration, she said.

The Biological Base and The "e-cigarette Disease"

Shortly after the Fort Detrick base was closed (in July 2019), some unknown illnesses called the "vaping illness" broke out in the nearby area.
It is reported that in August 2019, the United States suddenly announced the "e-Cigarette Disease", that is, lung injury (EVALI) related to e-cigarettes or atomized products, and the number of cases reached its peak in September.

As of October 3, 2019, after 23 cases (only voluntary cases were reported) of e-cigarette disease occurred in Maryland where the Fort Detrick base is located, the state health minister Robert Neal issued a new order to the doctor:
The symptoms and prevalence of e-cigarette patients have sparked long-term discussions in the United States. The doctor even called out the situation.

According to US media reports, most of the patients with e-cigarette diseases are young people in good health, teenagers, and in their twenties. They usually have symptoms such as vomiting, fever, and fatigue for a few days. Some people need to be treated in the intensive care unit or using a ventilator for several weeks.

On November 1, 2019, CNN reported a suspected death from electronic cigarette lung disease in a program. Two months after the death of patient Mary Kelly, her family is still not sure whether the cause of death is related to e-cigarettes. CNN Chief Medical Journalist Sanjay Gupta said during the connection that the United States has been selling electronic cigarettes since 2007, and there have never been any similar cases of any kind of mysterious lung disease before.
The New York Times reported on September 11, 2019, citing Melody Pizzada, chief physician of pediatrics at Winspro Hospital in New York, as saying that the outbreak of the e-cigarette disease is "becoming an epidemic" and "the situation is very wrong." "Something is very wrong!"

On October 2, 2019, The New York Times detailed the cases of e-cigarette diseases in another report.

According to reports, the Mayo Clinic in the United States studied lung tissue samples of 17 patients with e-cigarette disease and found that the damage was caused by exposure to toxic chemicals.

Brandon Larson, a surgical pathologist at the Mayo Clinic, said: "They look like unfortunate workers in industrial accidents. It is equivalent to a whole barrel of toxic chemicals leaking and the whole person exposed to toxic gases. There are chemicals burning in the respiratory tract."
He said these lung injuries also looked like those exposed to toxic substances such as mustard gas.

So looked like those exposed to toxic substances such as mustard gas. Mustard gas was a chemical weapon used in the First World War.

With the e-cigarette disease coming one of the worst flu seasons in the United States in a decade.

According to data released by the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention at the end of February this year, the 2019-2020 influenza season caused at least 32 million infections in the United States, 310,000 people were admitted to hospital for influenza-related diseases, and 18,000 people died of influenza-related diseases.
Mentioning these data, foreign media wrote a sentence in a prominent position: "The darkest experiment center of the US government." The epidemic in the United States has many mysteries about the database. How can the eloquent American politicians still present themselves as innocent?

Fort Detrick Base Closure and Local Unexplained “Flu”

According to a report by the American Broadcasting Corporation on July 12, last year, a community of retirees in Greenspring, Virginia, had an outbreak of a fatal disease.

According to ABC reports, the community is only an hour's drive from Fort Detrick Biological Base, which closed mysteriously last year and then quickly restarted this year. Some people suspected that the outbreak in the community last year was the new coronavirus, but the reporter who reported the news denied this claim, saying that the local health department’s test conclusion was caused by Haemophilus influenzae. However, many netizens recommend testing the community members to see if they carry the new coronavirus antibody.

According to the Fairfax County Health Bureau, on June 30, 2019, the "Green Spring" community discovered the case of this unexplained respiratory disease for the first time. As of July 15, 2019, the number of deaths related to the disease in the community rose to 3, a total of 63 community residents were sick, and 19 staff members also showed symptoms.
It was reported that the patient's symptoms include "fever, cough, body pain, wheezing, hoarse voice, and general weakness", and some patients also have symptoms of pneumonia. The two elderly patients who died were hospitalized due to symptoms of pneumonia, and their own health conditions were more complicated.

Director of the US Centers for Disease Control admits: some of the "flu" deceased may be suffering from some “new coronary pneumonia”.

At 9:30 am on March 11th local time, Robert Redfield, director of the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, admitted that some of the "flu" deceased may be suffering from new coronary pneumonia.

At the hearing, Rep. Harley Rouda asked Robert Redfield, director of the Centers for Disease Control, if there was a possibility that some flu patients would be misdiagnosed and actually be carriers of coronavirus.
Rep. Harry Ruda immediately asked: "So some people in the United States seem to have died of flu, but it may actually be a coronavirus?"

Rouda followed up and asked, "So we could have some people in the United States dying for what appears to be influenza when in fact it could be the coronavirus?"

Redfield admitted that so far in the United States, the diagnosis of some cases is indeed the case.

The doctor replied that "some cases have actually been diagnosed that way in the United States today."

Recently, according to US media reports, Michael Maylem, Mayor of Belleville, New Jersey, said he had been infected with the new coronavirus in November 2019.

The latest test results obtained by Melham also show that he has a new coronavirus antibody. The United States previously reported the first local diagnosis of new coronary pneumonia in late January.

Melham believes that many of the severe flus in the past were probably new coronary pneumonia, and many people around him had been sick and had severe symptoms in November and December last year.

Michael Melham is not alone. Many netizens also said that before the epidemic in China, they felt that the new coronavirus had spread in the United States.
I have been thinking and telling others about my experience. I live in New York and work in Nassau County. At the beginning of January, everyone—I said “every” means 80% of my colleagues, friends, family members, including my son, his classmates and the parents. We ALL had fever and flu-like symptoms. I swear my instincts have always told me that when China announces that their problems are getting serious, we already have the new coronavirus spread. Too many people are kept in the dark. Too many people believe and follow everything the government is saying. It's time to wake people up!

To this day, the source of the new coronavirus is still unclear. But experts and scientists around the world agree that the earliest reported cases are not necessarily the source of the virus.

On April 15, 2019, US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said confidently: "I used to be the director of the US CIA. We lie, we cheat, we steal. We also have a course dedicated to teaching these. It is the glory of the United States that is constantly exploring and advancing."
It seems that Pompeo is still using the CIA set to deal with the epidemic and public opinion of the new coronavirus.

What are the secrets of Fort Detrick Biological Base that dare not be disclosed, and why the timeline between the closure of Fort Detrick Biological Base and the "e-cigarette disease", influenza and new coronary pneumonia coincides, and American politicians Would Not Dare to give an explanation to the American people with an honest and open attitude?
