Tommy Colletti Follow GLOBALISM JUST DIED IN DAVOS

Howard Lutnick just walked into the lion's den — and told the World Economic Forum exactly what they didn't want to hear. "Globalism has failed." Not whispered. Not softened. Declared — on their own stage. He dismantled the entire WEF doctrine in minutes:

- Offshoring hollowed out the West
- Cheap labor destroyed innovation
- Net Zero made Europe dependent on China
- Sovereignty begins with borders
- Nations must control their industry, energy, and medicine

Then came the line that shook the room:

"Why would Europe agree to Net Zero when they don't even make a battery?" That's the truth globalists can't answer. Green agendas without industry. Climate pledges without sovereignty. Moral posturing while outsourcing power to Beijing. America First isn't isolation. It's independence. And Lutnick made it crystal clear: The old model is finished. The globalist experiment has failed. And the future belongs to nations that put their people first. Davos just heard the obituary — live.

First responders to climb Manitou Incline on Friday, sound alarms to mark timeline of tragedy

The Gazette Follow

More than 200 first responders and military personnel are expected to climb the Manitou Incline on Friday morning to mark the 25th anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks. The somber climb will honor the 343 firefighters who died in the towers, and Winchell expects some participants will come dressed ready to respond to fire with all their heavy gear on, said Andrew Winchell, assistant chief for the Manitou Springs Fire Department. On September 14, 2001, just days after the 9/11 attacks, the crew of the German destroyer Lütjens intercepted the homebound USS Winston S. Churchill. Flying the American flag at half-mast, the entire German crew lined the rails in full dress uniform with a handmade bedsheet banner reading "We Stand By You" to honor a grieving nation.

Timeless Enigma Follow

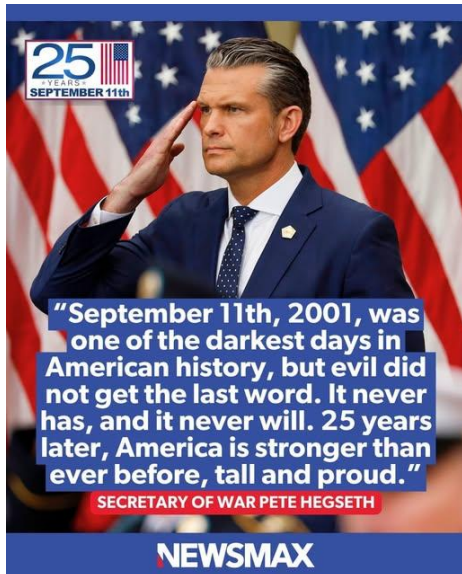

In early September 2001, the American destroyer USS Winston S. Churchill was participating in routine training exercises off the coast of the United Kingdom. Operating alongside her was the German destroyer Lütjens. During their time together, the two crews spent time tied up in port, sharing meals, swapping stories, and building a deep friendship. Then came the morning of September 11.

As news of the terrorist attacks reached the ships, the Churchill was immediately recalled to the United States to secure the East Coast. Port visits were canceled, and a heavy, grief-stricken silence fell across the American vessel. Cut off from their families and watching their homeland change from thousands of miles away, the crew felt completely isolated. On September 14, 2001, as the Churchill began her journey home, the Lütjens requested to come alongside. What happened next became one of the most immortalized acts of international solidarity in naval history: Manning the Rails: As the Lütjens drew near, the American sailors looked over and saw that the entire German crew had lined up on deck in full dress uniform—a formal naval honor traditionally reserved only for heads of state. The Flag at Half-Mast: High on the German mast, the crew had raised the American flag, flying it at half-mast to honor the thousands of innocent lives lost in the attacks. The Bedsheet Message: Displayed prominently from the bridge wing was a makeshift banner, hand-inked onto a white ship bedsheet, reading simply: "We Stand By You".

As the Lütjens pulled parallel, the boatswain's mate blew his whistle. The German sailors stood in rigid, silent salute, maintaining their formation as the ships rode the ocean waves together. For the grieving American crew, the gesture was completely overwhelming. An officer on the Churchill later wrote home, noting that "there was not a dry eye on the bridge" as they realized they were not standing alone in the dark. The original bedsheet banner was preserved and later donated to the Naval History and Heritage Command. The Lütjens crew proved that true alliances aren't just defined by military treaties or geopolitical strategies—they are forged in the quiet empathy that prompts a friend to stand by your side during your darkest hour.

Some of the heros of 9/11 that we did not know about: Timeless Enigma Follow

On the morning of September 11, 2001, Lower Manhattan suddenly became a trap. When the twin towers fell, every single bridge, tunnel, and subway line out of the area was instantly locked down. More than 500,000 terrified people were forced to flee on foot toward the absolute edge of the island. Pinned against the seawall by a massive, rolling wave of toxic dust and debris, they were completely out of options. With nowhere left to walk, some began jumping directly into the deep, churning waters of the Hudson River.

The mariners of New York Harbor were nobody's designated first responders. They were ordinary tugboat captains, ferry operators, dinner cruise pilots, and private fishermen. Seeing the unfolding catastrophe from the water, Coast Guard Lieutenant Michael Day keyed his radio transmitter, broadcasting a blind plea into the airwaves: "All available boats. This is the United States Coast Guard. Anyone wanting to help with the evacuation of Lower Manhattan, report to Governor's Island." He had absolutely no idea who was listening. But within twenty minutes, the horizon completely transformed. Dozens of vessels began pivoting sharply toward the thick black smoke. Among them was Vincent Ardolino, captain of a small local party boat called the Amberjack V. As he ordered his crew to steer directly into the ash cloud, he resolved: "Even if I can save one person, that's one person less to suffer and die." Nobody ordered these mariners to go. There was no financial compensation, no corporate strategy, and no guarantee of safety.

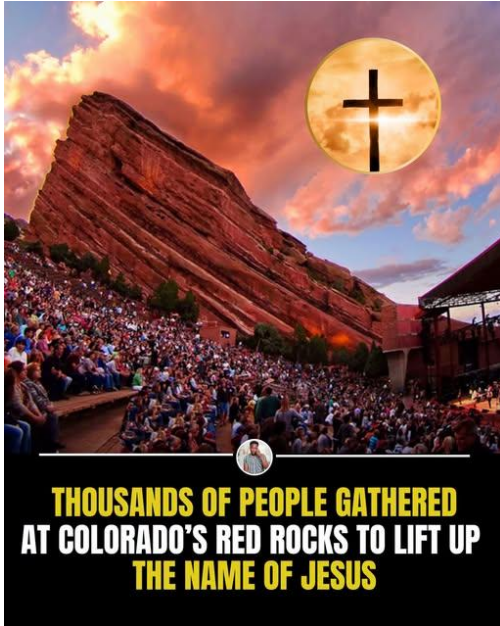

Tugboats pushed their bows directly against the concrete seawalls, using their powerful engines to hold steady while strangers scrambled aboard. Ferry crews loaded passengers until their decks were visibly sitting low in the water. For nine grueling hours, this makeshift civilian armada sailed back and forth through the ash. By the time the sun set, these ordinary boat captains had successfully evacuated 500,000 people to safety. It surpassed the legendary evacuation of Dunkirk in World War II, officially becoming the largest maritime rescue operation in human history—organized entirely by everyday citizens who refused to stand by while their neighbors drowned.

🇺🇸 Trump just said something at the White House tonight that the entire country is going to be talking about tomorrow. And I was not ready for it. At a law enforcement dinner — surrounded by the officers who keep America safe — Trump looked at the crowd and asked two questions.

“Who likes JD Vance?” The room erupted.

“Who likes Marco Rubio?” The room erupted again.

And then Trump smiled. And said — “Alright. Sounds like a good ticket. I do believe that’s a dream team.”

And I sat here thinking about what that means.

JD Vance. The boy whose father left. Who was raised by a grandmother who refused to give up on him. Who joined the Marines because it was the only way to afford college. Who went from zero to Vice President of the United States. Marco Rubio. The son of a bartender who stood behind that bar for 70 years so his son could stand in front of the world. Who became the highest ranking Hispanic official in American history. Who Trump himself called the best Secretary of State ever. These two men did not come from money. They did not come from power. They came from nothing. And they built everything. And tonight Trump looked at a room full of the people who protect this country and said — these are your next leaders. God’s plan for America is not finished. Not even close. 🇺🇸❤️🇺🇸 If JD Vance and Marco Rubio as a future ticket excites you... tell me what that combination means to you for America’s future. Say it below. 🙏🙏 #Trump #JDVance #MarcoRubio #fblifestyle 🇺🇸

Anvar Ahmad is in USA. •Follow BIG UPDATE | President Trump — today, because of you — Secretary of Homeland Security Mullin is in tears. Tears streaming down his face in front of the entire chamber. And he said it himself — what President Trump did for my son — I will carry that gratitude with me for the rest of my life. Senator Markwayne Mullin's 15-year-old son Jim was a world-class wrestler. Strong. Gifted. His father's entire world. Then, one day, a severe brain injury changed everything in an instant. Jim opened his eyes — and he could no longer recognize his own parents. The son Markwayne had watched grow up every day — looked at his own father and saw a complete stranger. There was only one thing Jim still remembered. Donald Trump was the President. When Trump learned what had happened — he didn't simply send a card. He didn't make a public statement. He personally picked up the phone and called. Then he sent his private plane so Jim could travel to a rehabilitation center in California. And for two weeks — even while in the middle of the campaign trail — Trump called that boy every single day.

Then one day, his staff told him it was time to leave. He said, "not yet." They returned again. He said, "not yet." The third time they came — Trump looked at them and said — "I guarantee you that plane isn't leaving for at least 15 more minutes." He walked inside. Sat beside Jim. Took his hand. And said — "Do you know why I love your dad? Because he loves you." That one sentence. That one visit. Began helping Jim's memory come back. And in March 2026 — Mullin sat inside that chamber — tears he simply couldn't hold back — and said the words that left everyone listening emotional. "He did not do it for publicity. He did it because he cared." My wife heard this tonight and couldn't speak for a very long time. Then she quietly said — a man who stops a plane for a 15-year-old boy — without cameras, without headlines, without asking for credit — that isn't a President simply performing his duty. That is a human being showing a very rare kind of heart. 🙏🇺🇸

Tonight, say one prayer for Jim Mullin and his recovery. And say another for the man who chose to sit beside him when he had every reason to keep moving. 🙏🇺🇸 Is there someone in your life who quietly showed up for you — without cameras, without recognition — at exactly the moment you needed them most? Tell me about that person today. 🙏🇺🇸 #Trump #AmericaFirst #RealTrump #JimMullin #fbllifestyle

TRUMP ORDERS SMITHSONIAN TO HONOR WASHINGTON, REPLACE ABSTRACT JUNK WITH A COLOSSUS

President Trump just put the Smithsonian on notice.

"I am calling on the Smithsonian Institution to honor the Life and Legacy of George Washington, America's Greatest Hero, with a five-year exhibition at the National Museum of American History, beginning now, and continuing through, February 22, 2032, the 300th anniversary of Washington's birth. I am also calling on the Smithsonian to erect a 30-foot "Colossus statue" of the Father of Our Country outside the Museum, to replace the so-called "Infinity" sculpture that stands there today. That strange modernist sculpture tells visitors nothing about America, inspires no one, and honors none of our Great American Heroes. George Washington does. He is easily America's Greatest Hero. Without him, our Country and our Freedoms wouldn't exist. And yet, during our Nation's 250th Anniversary Year, the Museum has failed to give George Washington and our other Founding Fathers the celebration they deserve. Washington's Heroic Crossing of the Delaware on December 25, 1776—One of the greatest moments and turning points of the Revolution—is not even mentioned in the Museum. His Victory at Trenton, and the stories of the Americans who fought and died for our Independence, deserve far more attention.

Under recently ended leadership, the Smithsonian created a "Center for Restorative History," and commissioned a "Decolonization Plan," to focus attention overwhelmingly on those who have been oppressed, but there is almost no attention paid to those who triumphed over great oppression, and against great odds. One current exhibit describes the period of 1492 to 1776, including Christopher Columbus's discovery of the New World, and the European settlement of America, as the "Great Unsettling" of the Continent. That tells you all you need to know about how twisted the thinking is today at the Smithsonian.

Instead of a Center for Restorative History, America's National History Museum should have a Center for American Heroes. Tell the stories of Americans who faced great challenges, overcame them, built great things, defended our Country, made America better, and helped our Nation more fully live up to our Founding Ideals. That is a History worth teaching, because it is America's story. Instead of focusing on ideological activism, the leaders of America's taxpayer-funded, National History Museum should be focused on telling America's story—fairly, accurately, and coherently—and there is no better person to start with than George Washington. So, I'm asking for the Smithsonian to install the 11-foot Washington statue that was featured at the recent Freedom 250 Grand Prix Race in the Museum's Flag Hall, and dedicate it this Constitution Day, September 17, 2026.

Conservative Truth

Tim Walz's Minnesota just had $199 MILLION in federal Medicaid funding put on hold because the state could not provide basic documents proving services were legitimate. That should surprise absolutely nobody after Minnesota reportedly disenrolled 3,000 providers over failed background checks, failed site visits, and other compliance problems. RFK Jr. is finally making Walz bring the receipts before taxpayers hand over another dime. "If Governor Gavin Newsom or Governor Tim Walz wants this funding released, all they have to do is provide basic documentation showing that these services are legitimate and not fraudulent. And that's common sense," Kennedy said. This is ABSOLUTELY right. Walz can whine all he wants, but Minnesota shouldn't receive ANY money until it deals with its fraud problem!

A retiring doctor forgave medical debt for nearly 200 cancer patients so they could focus on healing without the added financial burden

My Positive Outlooks

My Positive Outlooks

When a doctor closes a cancer clinic, the chapter might seem like a time to settle accounts. For Omar, it became a chance to erase them. In March 2020, after decades of serving patients in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, Omar closed the Arkansas Cancer Clinic. Reviewing unpaid bills, he saw patients struggling to make payments as small as $5 or $10. “Patients wanted to pay, but they just didn’t have the ability to pay,” he told CBS News. Omar discussed the situation with his wife and children, and the family decided the money was more useful to patients. In June and at Christmas 2020, he forgave about $650,000 owed by nearly 200 cancer patients. Holiday cards told them their balances were gone. “We didn’t, luckily, need the money; somebody else did. So it was done,” Omar said. For Omar, the gesture was rooted in the bond built over years of caring for people through cancer. “When you have the patient-physician relationship, you know each other,” he said. “The patients know you, and you know the patient. It’s rather sacred and very unique.” As he closed the chapter on his practice, Omar chose to give his patients one less burden to carry during an already difficult time. ❤️🌟

SWEDEN IS PUTTING PRINTED BOOKS AND HANDWRITING BACK INTO ITS CLASSROOMS AFTER A DECADE OF SCREENS AND FALLING READING SCORES

Satisfying Videos Follow

Sweden is rethinking how much technology belongs in the classroom after concerns over falling reading performance. The 2021 PIRLS results showed declining reading scores, prompting Education Minister Lotta Edholm to argue that Sweden had digitalized schools too quickly and too early. A 2023 curriculum revision restored greater emphasis on printed textbooks and handwriting in primary education, while the government funded new books for schools. In 2024, Swedish law was changed to strengthen pupils’ right to physical textbooks, and plans to move national tests for younger children onto screens were abandoned. The Karolinska Institute had also warned that excessive reliance on digital tools could harm learning. Screens have not disappeared, however, and remain valuable for older students and children with dyslexia. Sweden’s debate is increasingly about when children should use technology—not whether they should use it at all.
