Florida, Texas, and South Dakota are reportedly conducting legal reviews on how to shift away from property taxation without harming school funding. The federal government, through Trump's economic team, is prepared to support states that adopt pro-homeowner reforms.

Kansas proposes a sovereign wealth fund similar to Norway's, replacing tax revenue with oil and sales tax income.

North Dakota may fund essential services entirely through its oil-based Legacy Fund, potentially becoming the first U.S. state to fully eliminate property taxes.

Florida's HJR201 aims to eliminate most property taxes except those directly funding schools, with a vote likely in 2026.

Ohio's citizens gathered enough signatures to put a full property tax ban on the 2026 ballot, despite concerns over replacement revenue.

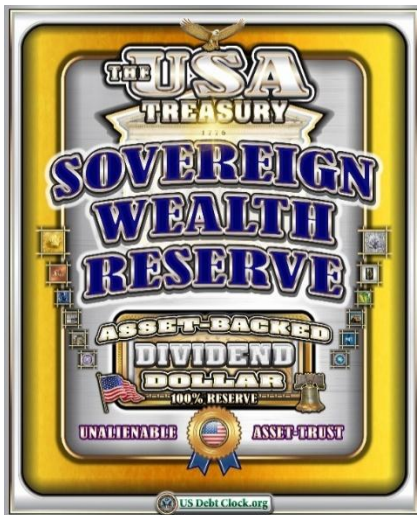

Pennsylvania is quietly exploring hybrid models for tax relief at the local level.

Illinois considers exempting long-term homeowners, though the policy faces backlash from newer property owners.

The US Debt Clock reveals a major shift toward a sovereign wealth reserve system, asset-backed dollar, and a new financial model built on real assets and institutional-grade infrastructure. THIS IS NOT DESIGN — THIS IS DIRECTION

What appears at first glance to be a stylized visual is, in reality, a highly structured financial message placed in plain sight. The US Debt Clock, followed by millions, is no longer just displaying numbers — it is beginning to communicate concepts that go far beyond public debt, pointing toward a fundamental shift in how the American monetary system is being envisioned. “USA Treasury – Sovereign Wealth Reserve”, suggesting a repositioning of the state as a direct manager of national value “Asset-Backed Dividend Dollar”, indicating a currency tied to real assets rather than debt expansion “100% Reserve”, implying a break from the current fractional system and a move toward full backing. When these elements are presented within the same visual framework, they do not represent a random idea — they outline a coherent model of economic reconstruction.

He told the crowd the United States has exited the business of buying arms for Ukraine and sending them into the conflict. Europe now holds the option to buy weapons on its own if it chooses to continue support.

The Lord Times Iran Crossed The RED LINE... The U.S. Navy Just Did Something BRUTAL In Hormuz

Iran made a critical mistake in the Strait of Hormuz that may have undermined all of its geopolitical calculations. The strait, which was opened on April 17th, was closed again just one day later. Citing the US blockade operation in the region, the Thrron regime locked down Hormuz once again and opened fire on ships passing through the strait. The revolutionary guards intimidated the whole world over the radio with the statement that every ship is a target until the blockade is lifted. But the IRGC was waiting, unaware of what would follow this audacious step because the US showed the whole world on live broadcast that the blockade was not just a threat on paper.

On April 19th, a massive shadow appeared in the waters of the Gulf of Oman. This was the 275 meter Iranian flagged cargo ship MV Tusca which was on the US Treasury Department's sanctions list due to its past illegal activities and weighed almost as much as an aircraft carrier. Tusa was trying to break the naval blockade and enter Iran's port of Bondar Abbas. The Arley Burke class guided missile destroyer USS Spruent patrolling the region intercepted the ship for exactly 6 hours. Those striking calls echoed over the radio. Motor vessel Tosska, motor vessel TSA, vacate your engine room, vacate your engine room. We're prepared to subject you to disabling fire. However, the Iranian crew ignored these warnings and did not deviate from their course. That was the moment the historic intervention, which Centcom would later broadcast second by second, took place.

Firing its 5-in MK45 gun, the USS Spruent directly struck Tusca's engine room, disabling the massive ship's propulsion system. When the ship was immobilized in the water, US Marines from the 31st Marine Expeditionary Unit swiftly boarded it and completely seized control. This operation went down in records as the very first instance of shots being fired and a seizure taking place in the blockade that began on April 13th.

Right after the incident, Donald Trump delivered a shocking message to Thrron from his Truth social account, announcing that they blew a giant hole in the ship's engine room and that the cargo inside was being inspected moment by moment. With this operation, the US did something massive to be able to unlock the Strait of Hormuz again.

But this is just the tip of the iceberg because the US announced that it would not stop at seizing the Iranian ship and that the scope of this operation would expand.

According to an exclusive report by the Wall Street Journal, the Pentagon has launched a campaign to seize all Iran linked tankers in international waters in the coming days. The US is deploying its most elite units to the region, one after another to board Iranian ships.

Arley Burke class destroyers, the 31st Marine Expeditionary Unit, SEAL Commandos, Seahawk helicopters, and the amphibious assault ship USS Tripoli descended on the scene with a single order. Added to this were the USS Abraham Lincoln and the USS Gerald R. Ford which had returned to the Red Sea along with Super Hornet squadrons F-35C's and P8 Poseidon reconnaissance aircraft. The AI supported drones of task force 59 started digitally stamping every boat breathing in Hormuz.

Currently around 25 to 35 Iran linked tankers and ships in Hormuz and the Gulf of Oman are being tracked second by second. This move by Washington was described by Bloomberg and the New York Post as a new phase of naval blockade extending beyond the Middle East. After all this, the picture emerging in the region is clear. Hormuz is no longer just a straight. It is practically a global hunting ground. And what will shake Iran the most is that this hunt has only just begun. To understand how the story got to this point, one needs to go back to the morning of April 18th. Approximately 20 commercial ships frantically altered their course toward Oman in a panic. In this chaotic environment, the IRGC targeted at least three oil tankers in Hormuz. Furthermore, the massive Suezmaxclass Indian tanker Sanmar Herald carrying 2 million barrels of Iraqi oil was subjected to Iran's attacks. The Tehran regime had granted the tanker permission to pass, notifying the captain's name as second on the list. Sea Navy Sea Navy, this is Moangastan. You gave me clearance to go. My name second on your list. You gave me clearance to go. You are fighting now. Let me turn back. As the ship approached the coast of Oman, IRGC fast attack craft suddenly opened fire. There was no warning. There was no radio call. There was no challenge. The recording that dropped from Sanmar Herald's Bridge to Tanker Trackers was the sound of a nightmare.

In those same minutes, a container ship was also hit by a stray bullet. In total, three commercial ships were targeted and at least one took direct damage.

The world saw for the first time just how dirty the game Iran was playing truly was. It was during this critical period that the groundwork for the US operation to seize Iranian ships in Hormuz was laid.
