JD Vance@JDVance The president offered multiple off ramps, but was very clear throughout this process: the drug trafficking must stop, and the stolen oil must be returned to the United States. Maduro is the newest person to find out that President Trump means what he says. Kudos to our brave special operators who pulled off a truly impressive operation.

BREAKING: Venezuela's former Chief of National Intelligence Hugo Carvajal has OFFICIALLY RELEASED every U.S. Senator who is on THE VENEZUELA LIST of politicians who have been receiving MILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN KICKBACKS from the Maduro regime and Venezuelan drug trafficking organizations that make up his government in exchange for using their government positions and influence to undermine President Trump and Secretary of War Pete Hegseth's ongoing war with these narcoterrorists. Every one of these Senators is guilty of providing aid and comfort to THE ENEMY during a time of war and has the blood of their fellow American citizens (HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS of whom die of drug overdoses every year at the hands of these criminal drug trafficking organizations that bring deadly drugs into our country) on their hands. May each and every one of them be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law and may their names forever live in shame for their treason. Below is EVERY U.S. SENATOR ON THE VENEZUELA LIST:

- ✓ Michael Bennet - D - Colorado
- ✓ John Hickenlooper - D - Colorado
- ✓ Richard Blumenthal - D - Connecticut
- ✓ Chris Murphy - D - Connecticut
- ✓ Chris Coons - D - Delaware

Everyone's been focused on the helicopters — especially the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment — and for good reason. The assault was spectacular. But the real reason those helicopters flew into Venezuelan airspace without serious resistance wasn't rotor blades or bravado. It was information dominance. The quiet hero of the operation was the EA-18G Growler from the United States Navy.

As U.S. naval forces appeared off Venezuela's coastline, Growlers began flying along the edges of Venezuelan airspace. The media, doing what it does best, dismissed this as "show of force" theater. That was wrong.

Those flights were intelligence missions. Growlers are purpose-built to detect, locate, and suppress enemy radar. Each pass wasn't posturing — it was mapping. Where radar coverage was strongest. Where it was weakest. How systems reacted. What turned on. What stayed silent. What frequencies lit up. Flight after flight, the Navy built a living map of Venezuela's air-defense network. By the end of it, the U.S. likely understood that system better than the people operating it. That's how airspace gets opened without chaos. You don't need to smash every radar. You just need to know which ones matter. Once you know the weak links, a handful of precision actions can create a corridor wide enough for helicopters to pass through untouched. By the time the operation kicked off, Venezuelan radar wasn't just compromised — it was predictable. The Growlers had already done the hard work.

American History offers a number of moments when prolonged provocation, lawlessness, and international contempt forced a President of the United States to choose between endless negotiation, endless harm to America, or decisive action. Two centuries ago President Thomas Jefferson's bold decision to confront the Barbary pirates after years of failed diplomacy and maritime predation has been echoed by President Donald Trump's strike and capture of Venezuela's Nicolás Maduro.

Maduro's fall immediately triggered a wave of asset freezes and seizure orders. Over $14 billion linked to state oil accounts and shell companies was locked within 48 hours. At least six European investment banks are under quiet review for facilitating cross-border money laundering under humanitarian and environmental project cover. The Biden-era agreements with Venezuelan petroleum distributors are being reviewed for criminal violations. At least two executive orders signed under the previous administration allowed cartel-tied companies to operate under climate transition loopholes, giving them access to U.S. infrastructure and legal immunity. These documents are now part of an ongoing investigation by a special DOJ task force. Testimonies are being collected from captured personnel inside Venezuela (More Info on gazetteller.com). All of them fall under federal jurisdiction due to the structure of the operation and the immediate legal transition once Maduro was secured. The old Native voices remind us: admire the flower, but bind your heart to the roots — or autumn will teach you loss.

Native Cultures Consortiums · Follow

The old Native voices remind us that beauty is never just what blooms on the surface. A flower may capture the eye, but only its roots give it life, strength, and meaning. When we fall in love with appearances and ignore what lies beneath, we build our hearts on something fragile. And when autumn arrives — when time, change, and truth strip things bare — loss becomes the lesson we were warned about.

LARGEST SEA TURTLE ON EARTH RETURNS TO SANIBEL ISLAND TO NEST AFTER 4 YEARS

Planet Earth.

Massive tracks on Sanibel Island led to this rare discovery today... a leatherback sea turtle, the largest turtle on Earth, weighing up to 2,000 pounds. It marks the first nest on the island in 4 years. These ancient giants can dive as deep as 4,000 feet and have been roaming the oceans since the time of dinosaurs. What an incredible and unexpected surprise!
