Keith England Follow Scott Bessent was a helluva pick by the Trump administration! Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent is reportedly gearing up to REVOKE the tax-exempt status of nonprofits including George Soros' Open Society Foundations, CAIR, and the Southern Poverty Law Center. And it could come with massive CIVIL PENALTIES and back taxes. For decades, these political operations have masqueraded as "charities" while living tax-free on the American dime. - Open Society pushes open borders, funds radical prosecutors, and bankrolls NGOs that sue America for enforcing immigration law. - SPLC slanders conservative and Christian groups as "hate groups" to get them deplatformed. - CAIR has been cited by federal prosecutors as an unindicted co-conspirator in the largest terrorism financing trial in U.S. history.

And you, the taxpayer, have been subsidizing it. According to the NY Post, Treasury and IRS are drawing up a sweeping audit under President Trump's 2025 executive order targeting nonprofits operating with a "substantial illegal purpose" — financing political violence and organized radical action. Bessent's inner circle is drafting the blueprint to strip 501(c)(3) status, which would force them to pay the 21% corporate tax rate like every real business. If taxed at 21% for 2024 alone: - Soros network would owe $163.6 MILLION - SPLC: $354,000- 17 CAIR chapters: $860,000 - Combined total: ~$165 MILLION in taxes they dodged Treasury officials are "like a dog with a bone" on this, sources say. Donald Trump For President IRANS SHADOW FLEET RUNS DRY: TRUMP BLOCKADE STRANGLES THE REGIME

The mullahs just lost their last big cash cushion. Wall Street Journal reports that Irans fleet of shadow tankers sitting off Malaysia and Singapore has officially run out of oil. Those vessels started the war holding roughly 135 million barrels of crude that Tehran quietly sold to China for billions. By early October the reserves were already under a million barrels. Now they are gone. This is exactly what Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent predicted and what the Trump-Hegseth blockade was designed to produce. Bessent has been blunt: "The noose is tightening around Iran's economy, and not even Iran's so-called allies can save it." He has repeatedly said the goal is to empty the regime's coffers and cut every remaining financial lifeline to its war machine.

CENTCOM Commander Admiral Brad Cooper confirmed the scale of the damage. The naval blockade has already denied Iran at least $25 billion in oil revenue. Oil accounts for 30 to 40 percent of the regime's government income. The rial has lost about a third of its value since July. Cooper added that the financial strain is so severe that Iran-aligned militias across the region are withholding payments from their own fighters to funnel money back to the IRGC, which itself is struggling to pay its troops. Maximum pressure is working. The floating storage that kept the regime afloat is exhausted. Fresh exports are blocked. The cash that funded terror proxies, missiles, and the war is drying up. The strategy was always simple: cut off the oil money and force the mullahs to choose between their nuclear and regional ambitions and economic survival. That choice is now staring them in the face.

TRUMP'S EPA FINALIZES $1.6 TRILLION IN DEREGULATION SAVINGS—BIGGER THAN PAST ADMINISTRATIONS COMBINED

The EPA under Administrator Lee Zeldin has quietly rolled out a new webpage tallying up the receipts on one of the Trump administration's least-noticed promises: cutting the red tape Washington piles onto everyday costs. The final number is $1.6 trillion in deregulatory savings for American families and businesses in a single year. The agency says that dwarfs "what past presidential administrations achieved over entire terms across all agencies combined." Zeldin put it plainly: "The Trump EPA is proving you can lower costs, restore consumer choice, and protect the environment at the same time." The single biggest line item: rescinding the 2009 Endangerment Finding this past February, which wiped out the greenhouse-gas emissions mandates stacked onto every new vehicle — including the start-stop feature that forces your engine to shut off at every red light. The EPA estimates that move alone saved roughly $2,400 per new vehicle and stands as the largest deregulatory action in U.S. history. Add in six Congressional Review Act resolutions Trump signed scrapping a truck EV mandate and a methane fee on energy producers, a September repeal of most Biden-era power-plant emissions rules, $30 billion in cancelled grants, and hundreds of millions more in slashed contracts, and the agency says it has now unwound more than $1.3 trillion of the roughly $1.8 trillion in regulatory costs it inherited from the Biden EPA. The bill for Biden's red tape just got $1.6 trillion smaller.

Hegseth's War Department Just Killed the Rebranded Confucius Institutes—No More Chinese Propaganda on Campus

When Pete Hegseth took over the Department of War, he made clear the soft rot of DEI was getting ripped out root and branch. The promoters tried the usual trick—rebrand it, hide it, hope no one notices. They were wrong. Hegseth's team stayed on it, and the result is a department that is gender-neutral, color-blind, and merit-based. Today he applied the same standard to a different kind of infiltration. "These Chinese government-backed propaganda cultural programs had infiltrated our nation's universities in almost every state," Hegseth said. Congress banned the original Confucius Institutes years ago, but the Chinese Communist Party simply changed the letterhead. "They came back disguised in new forms, just like DEI does. Just call it a different name."

The War Department added these sleeper organizations to its list of entities that threaten national security. What it found was 80 new propaganda cells operating across 30 universities. Different names, different charters, same mission: steal intellectual property and infiltrate the minds of American students. Within the last two months the department used the leverage it has—contracts, research dollars, security clearances—to systematically dismantle every single one.

Hegseth's message to Beijing and any other regime that thinks it can quietly harvest American innovation or turn the next generation against its own country was blunt: "We're done with that. No more and never again." To the universities that let the rebranded programs back in, he offered a simple instruction. Stay vigilant. Do not allow these influences to return.

The parallel is intentional and the pattern is clear. Whether the ideology is domestic DEI or foreign Communist Party soft power, the method is the same—rebrand, reinsert, wait for the next administration to look the other way. Hegseth's War Department is not looking the other way. The programs are gone. The warning is on the record. God bless our Republic, and God bless the troops who still fight for it.

Engineering Facts

Seventy hours of continuous operation without burning a single drop of fuel sounds impossible — yet engineers have now demonstrated exactly that. The test replaces traditional combustion with superheated plasma to generate thrust. Instead of igniting fuel, the system uses electrically energized plasma to accelerate airflow. This removes combustion entirely, eliminating emissions tied to burning hydrocarbons.

If scaled, the implications could be massive for aviation and aerospace. Aircraft endurance could increase dramatically, while maintenance demands tied to combustion systems may drop. The concept is especially promising for long-endurance drones, high-altitude platforms, and specialized aircraft where efficiency matters more than raw speed. While commercial passenger use is still far off, this experiment signals a potential shift in how propulsion is defined. Aviation's future may rely less on fuel — and more on physics.

"Whenever I post about the dangers of seed oils used for cooking, I typically get a lot of questions. One of the MAIN reasons they're bad is they (the Omega-6 linoleic fatty acid in them) cause and promote inflammation, and this is VERY bad for many diseases such as diabetes, cancer, heart disease, all neurological disorders, and many others!

Use this chart when you buy cooking oils, and avoid purchasing anything in the RED zone!

I've always used lard in my pie crusts and they are light and fluffly, plus I use it to grease my pans. When I started using beef tallow in my deep fat fryer – there is no sticky residue like there was using vegetable oils. I ordered Meriwether Farms Beef Tallow 7 lb. tub. Wild Wonders is in United States. · Follow The United States maintains an enormous amount of land along its highways. Every year, roughly 12 million acres of roadside are mowed—an area larger than the state of Maryland. For decades, this land has been managed as mowed grass that feeds almost nothing, at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

North Carolina figured out a better use for it in 1985. What started as 12 experimental acres of native wildflowers planted along roadsides has grown to 1,500 managed acres across the state. The program was inspired by a similar initiative in Texas and championed by North Carolina's First Lady, Dottie Martin.

The financial and ecological results are striking. The program saves an estimated $200,000 a year in mowing costs. More importantly, research conducted by NC State University found that these wildflower beds support six times more pollinator bees, 2.5 times more pollinator flies, five times more pollinator butterflies, and 37 times more pollinator wasps than traditionally maintained roadsides.

The wildflowers provide vital pollen, nectar, and habitat for pollinators, which are increasingly threatened by habitat loss. These roadside habitats serve as vital links between fragmented farmlands, helping to sustain the pollinators that support North Carolina's $111 billion agriculture industry.

The wildflowers provide vital pollen, nectar, and habitat for pollinators, which are increasingly threatened by habitat loss. These roadside habitats serve as vital links between fragmented farmlands, helping to sustain the pollinators that support North Carolina's $111 billion agriculture industry. The takeaway is not just that wildflowers are pretty. It is that 12 million acres of potential pollinator habitat is being mowed into uselessness every year. And one state has proven there is a better way.

Engineering Facts

Across Norway's icy coasts, a new form of sustainable architecture is emerging — built not from bricks or steel, but from repurposed wind turbine blades. These massive blades, once symbols of green energy, were nearly impossible to recycle due to their tough fiberglass composition. Instead of sending them to landfills, Norwegian engineers found a way to transform them into modular, weatherproof micro-homes designed to withstand Arctic storms. Each curved blade section forms the perfect aerodynamic shelter — insulated, durable, and lightweight. Inside, the design is minimal yet cozy, combining recycled wood, solar panels, and natural light through circular windows cut from the blade's body. What was once part of a towering turbine now stands as a self-sustaining home, blending futuristic design with deep ecological purpose. This innovation not only solves a growing waste problem but also redefines circular living. By turning discarded engineering marvels into homes for researchers, travelers, and low-income families, Norway is proving that sustainability isn't just about renewable energy — it's about renewable thinking.
